Pugh's Tips & Clips

Protect Your Plants from Frost

Coverings protect your plants more from frost than from extreme cold. Covers that extend to the ground and are not in contact with plant foliage can lesson cold injury reducing radiant heat loss from the plant and the ground.

Foliage in contact with the cover is often injured because of heat transfer from the foliage to the cold cover.

You can use cloth sheets, quilts, or black plastic. Remove the plastic covers during the day to provide ventilation of trapped solar radiation. A light bulb under the cover is a simple method of providing heat to ornamental plants. Prevent frost from ruining your plants and have them looking their best!
